THESIS AT PH.D. (IN PROGRESS)

TOPIC: PAKISTAN-SAUDI ARABIA RELATIONS: 1977-2008

Place Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi
Supervisor Dr. Savita Pande, Professor
 South Asian Studies Division, School of International Studies

An overview of Pakistan's foreign policy shows that Pakistan's goals have remained more or less constant, although their scope was often redefined and new dimensions were added. The diplomatic and military strategies to pursue these goals also varied over time. Pakistan and Saudi Arabia share a multi-faceted strategic relationship spanning political, economic and energy, defence, security, religious and cultural realms. Conventional wisdom has it that three 'A's sum up Pakistan's policy matrix: Allah, Army and America. But this is a half-truth. To complete the picture, one has to add a fourth A (Saudi Arabia) and a C (China) to the list. While Pakistan has long-standing ties with both patron states, these have become more nuanced since America emerged as a global hyper-power and India as a regional power. The proposed study attempts to adopt descriptive as well as analytical methodology.
